

Wombs & Wildfires

Prioritizing Perinatal Equity in Wildfire Mitigation & Resilience

Interviews & Workshop to Inform Oregon Policy Recommendations

Invitation to birthworkers, Indigenous leaders, climate advocates, frontline health workers, and community organizers

$50 gift card for interviewing

Story Sharing:

Share your experience now on the effect of wildfires on pregnant and postpartum clients and patients

Interactive Workshop:

Save the Date for our two-part interactive workshop series where we will be drafting recommendations for wildfire resilience centering perinatal people - August 23rd 12-2pm PT and September 19th 12-2pm PT

Nurturely, an Oregon-based non-profit working for equity in perinatal wellness, and Human Rights Watch, a New York-based international human rights organization, are partnering on a project to with two objectives:

- 1) Document the impacts of wildfire exposure on pregnancy, postpartum, and newborn health, and
- 2) Create an advocacy plan with realistic interventions supported by frontline health workers. Nurturely and Human Rights Watch will achieve these objectives through interviews with perinatal health workers and collaborative co-creation of a set of intervention recommendations.

nurturely.org/wildfires

 nurturely
equity in perinatal wellness

HUMAN RIGHTS
WATCH